John J. Nance

Travels from: Washington

Fee Range: $7,501 - $10,000

A dynamic and deeply dedicated member of the medical community for nearly two decades, John J. Nance brings a rich diversity of professional training and background to the quest of patient safety and medical practice improvement.

John was one of the founding members of the National Patient Safety Foundation at the AMA and a member of the Executive Committee who has served on the board for 9 years. He is a native Texan who grew up in Dallas where he earned his Bachelor's Degree from SMU and his Juris Doctor Degree from SMU School of Law before admission to the Texas bar. Installed as a Distinguished Alumni of Southern Methodist University in 2002, he is also a decorated Air Force officer-pilot veteran of Vietnam and Operations Desert Storm/Desert Shield, and a Lt. Colonel in the USAF Reserve, well known for his pioneering involvement in Air Force human factors flight safety education.

As a professional pilot, John has piloted a wide variety of jet aircraft, including most of Boeing's line as well as the Air Force C-141, and he has logged over 13,000 hours of flight time in his commercial airline (Braniff and Alaska) and Air Force careers. But more important to his leading-edge role in healthcare, John Nance was one of the pioneers of the pivotal safety revolution in professional communication, teamwork and leadership known in aviation as CRM, Crew Resource Management. His book about safety in human systems entitled Blind Trust, published internationally in 1986, is widely credited with helping to spark not only the universal acceptance of CRM principles in aviation, but the earliest infusion of culture-changing lessons derived from aviation into medical practice.

John has become a trusted and internationally recognized broadcast analyst and advocate for both medical/patient safety and aviation safety. Before joining ABC World News and Good Morning America in 1994, he had logged countless appearances on national shows such as Oprah, the PBS News Hour, Today and CNN as well as most Canadian and English-speaking networks worldwide. In addition, his editorials have been published in newspapers nationwide, including the Los Angeles Times and USA Today, and he has been listed for more than a decade in Who's Who in America.

John J. Nance is also the internationally-known author of 18 major books, (five non-fiction, 13 fiction), his latest being Orbit (Simon and Schuster) which released to rave reviews in March of 2006 and is in development by Fox 2000 studios as a major motion picture. Two other of his books, Pandora's Clock and Medusa's Child, were both made into major, successful two-part mini-series for NBC and ABC respectively, and still air periodically around the world.

With most of his busy schedule of consulting and speaking dedicated to the urgency of improving healthcare from patient safety to practice satisfaction, John has also emerged as one of the leading thinkers on matters of major change to America's healthcare system. A dynamic and vocal advocate of completely removing the tort system from involvement in medical accidents and mistakes, he recently convened and hosted an unprecedented conference on the subject with the sponsorship of AHRQ and released a major book on Patient Safety entitled Why Hospitals Should Fly.

Already one of the nation's most dynamic and energizing professional speakers, John J. Nance's messages to medical practitioners have reached new heights of relevance and importance as seen in his presentations to such pace-setting entities as the Institute for Healthcare Improvement and a who's who of healthcare organizations.

John's unique ability to reach every member of the healthcare community comes from his unprecedented background mix of law, safety, aviation and even broadcasting. Physicians in particular resonate deeply with his powerful messages about leadership and the human propensity for mistakes even among the most tenured professionals, and his extensive experience working with hospitals and clinics nationwide has been documented by continuous client praise and the highest effectiveness ratings.

John J. Nance lives in Seattle, Washington and travels among healthcare organizations nationwide.
